In her comprehensive guide, "Birdfinding in British Columbia," Melina Fenja Persson shares her extensive knowledge of the province's birds and their habitats, providing birders of all levels with the tools they need to plan successful birding trips and maximize their chances of spotting the birds they're looking for.

Detailed Site Descriptions

The book is organized into three main sections, each covering a different region of British Columbia: the Lower Mainland, the Interior, and the North Coast. Within each section, Persson provides detailed descriptions of over 200 birding sites, including:

- Directions and access information
- Habitat types and target species
- Seasonal recommendations and tips
- Maps and photographs

Species Accounts

In addition to the site descriptions, the book also includes detailed accounts of over 500 bird species that can be found in British Columbia. Each account includes:

- Physical description and identification tips

- Distribution and habitat preferences
- Vocalizations and other distinguishing characteristics
- Status and conservation concerns

Birding Tips and Techniques

For beginning birders, Persson provides essential information on birding equipment, field identification techniques, and ethical birding practices. She also includes tips on how to find and approach birds, and how to record and share your observations.

Stunning Photography and Artwork

Throughout the book, Persson's stunning photographs and original artwork bring the birds and their habitats to life. These visuals enhance the text and provide a valuable reference for birders of all skill levels.
