Once upon a time, there was a little ladybug named Amelia May. Amelia May was a kind and helpful ladybug who loved to help others.

One day, Amelia May was flying through the forest when she saw a baby bird that had fallen out of its nest. The baby bird was scared and alone, and Amelia May felt sorry for it.

Amelia May flew down to the baby bird and asked, "What's wrong, little bird?"

The baby bird said, "I've fallen out of my nest and I can't get back up."

Amelia May said, "Don't worry, I'll help you."

Amelia May carefully picked up the baby bird and flew it back to its nest. The baby bird's mother was so grateful to Amelia May for saving her baby.

Amelia May was happy to have helped the baby bird, and she continued on her way.

A little while later, Amelia May came across a group of ants that were struggling to carry a heavy leaf. Amelia May flew down to help the ants, and together they were able to carry the leaf to their colony.

The ants were so grateful to Amelia May for her help, and they told her that she was the kindest ladybug they had ever met.

Amelia May was happy to have helped the ants, and she continued on her way.

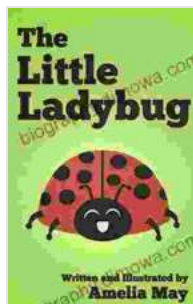

As Amelia May was flying through the forest, she saw a caterpillar that was stuck in a spider's web. Amelia May flew down to help the caterpillar, and she carefully freed it from the web.

The caterpillar was so grateful to Amelia May for saving her, and she told Amelia May that she was the bravest ladybug she had ever met.

Amelia May was happy to have helped the caterpillar, and she continued on her way.

Amelia May was a kind and helpful ladybug who loved to help others. She always put others before herself, and she was always willing to lend a helping hand.

Amelia May's story is a reminder that even the smallest of creatures can make a big difference in the world. Amelia May's kindness and compassion helped the baby bird, the ants, and the caterpillar, and her story inspires us to be more kind and helpful to others.
